Clearfield Democrats Plan Love Feast To Harmonize Warring Elements In Party

Preliminary Meet Held Saturday To Lay A Foundation

That the Democrats of Pennsylvania are in earnest in their efforts to harmonize the warring factions which have rent and torn their ranks for so many years, was evidenced in Clearfield on Saturday afternoon last when about fifty local and Lawrence Democrats met in The Dimeling parlors at the call of Hon. J. Frank Snyder, local member of the State Committee of 72, appointed at last Friday's meeting in Harrisburg.

The meeting was called to order by State Committeeman Dor Ginkery after which Mr. Snyder took the floor and outlined the purposes of the Harrisburg gathering and read the resolutions adopted there as expressive of the wishes of the Democrats of the State, without regard to former factional affiliations. The resolutions "viewed with alarm" and also "pointed with pride" and with old time Democratic hopefulness showed that what the grand old Keystone Commonwealth needed right now was an allopathic dose of Democratic leadership and office holding, with its advantages, also its perils.

Following Mr. Snyder's remarks urging a harmonious getting together of all Democrats for the common good, short talks were made along the same line by Judge Single, Bell, ex-Judge Allison O. Smith, Betts, Fred B. Kerr, J. D. Connelly, U. S. Marshal John F. Short, Peter Gearhart, County Chairman A. M. Gorman and others.

A resolution was then unanimously adopted providing for the calling together of representative Democratic workers from every district in the county at a dinner or luncheon to be held in Clearfield some time previous to March 10th when a harmony ticket for Governor, United States Senators, State and district offices is to be chosen. Mr. Snyder in his capacity of "Harmony Committeeman" desires to meet with all the Democratic workers of the county in order to govern his actions by their wishes.

The calling of this meeting was placed in the hands of County Chairman Gorman, who will send out the call when the date has been finally agreed upon.

ALDA CONCERT HAS BEEN CANCELLED; MADAME IS ILL

Legion Cabaret And Dance Will Draw Big
Audience At Dimeling
This Evening Instead.

REFUND MONEY

The Alda Concert scheduled for this evening at the Driggs Theatre has been cancelled. Miss Alda was taken sick on Friday evening and was unable to fill her engagement at Lancaster, Pa., on Saturday evening and it was believed that she would be able to come here tonight but a message received late last evening advised that her illness would prevent her appearance here. Inasmuch as she is scheduled far ahead there is no possibility of her appearing here from some time. Those who love music are sorely disappointed to day.

The American Legion Cabaret and Dance, while of a different musical nature, will serve to take away the disappointment and many of those who had arranged to take in the Alda concert are simply switching to the Dimeling where the Legion is putting up a bang up entertainment tonight. Two dollars is the charge for the dance but spectators who wish to take in the cabaret, will be charged only fifty cents. Here is a chance to see how the doughboys made merry in France.

Patrons of the Alda concert will have their money refunded tomorrow. The cashier of the musical club will be at the Clearfield Talking Machine Shop tomorrow from nine a. m. to five p. m. for the purpose of redeeming tickets. Since the Alda concert cannot be enjoyed, throw your support to the American Legion tonight.

Map Of Tyrone Quad Ready For Public And Business Use

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 27.—Secretary of Internal Affairs James F. Woodward today announced that the drafting work on the topographic map of the Tyrone quadangle has been completed by the Bureau of Topographic and Geological Survey of the Pennsylvania Department of Internal Affairs and that proof sheets may be seen at the department at Harrisburg and in the postoffices at Petersburg, Tyrone, Warriors Mark, Birmingham and Alexandria. The map is the result of surveys made last year by the Survey Bureau in the Department of Internal Affairs, working in co-operation with the U. S. Geological Survey.

It shows in great detail all of the towns, houses, railroads, roads, schools, streams, rivers and political boundaries as well as the shapes and elevation of all hills and valleys. By means of the map it is possible to estimate within a few feet the elevation above sea level of any house or other point and exact measure may be made of the distance between any two points. The map of the Tyrone quadangle includes the borough of Tyrone on its western border, the postoffice of Dix on its northern border, Gatesburg in the northeast corner and just includes the outskirts of Huntingdon in its southeast corner. The area covered is one of the most interesting, physiographically in all Pennsylvania. Here as elsewhere in the state, the shape of the hills and valleys is governed primarily by the hardness and resistance of the rocks but modified by the past history of the area. The map brings out what is quite apparent to anyone viewing the landscape, that the high, narrow ridges generally have fairly level crests, and that the crests of the main ridges are about the same height. The narrowness of these ridges is due to the upturned position and thinness of the harder rocks that form the crest.

Brussels, Belgium, Feb. 27.—Hugh Gibson, American Minister to Poland, and Miss Inez Raynolds, daughter of a Belgian Cavalry Colonel, were married here today. The couple will leave Thursday for America on their honeymoon.

Dead—Fifteen Minutes!

Fear "Land Grabbers" Will Take Advantage of Bonus Bill

Washington, D. C., February 27.—Land grabbing by others than veterans would be made possible under the present draft of the bonus bill, is the opinion of several Congressmen who have studied the measure closely. It became known today that Representative Frear, a Farm Bloc man, had been warned that the bill contained a "joker" which would permit opening up public lands to others than ex-soldiers. Frear intends to study the draft carefully and if he finds that the land grant phase is too wide open, he will undoubtedly take action looking towards its amendment.

In the meantime the American Legion is starting a movement to prevent further delays in the passage of the legislation. Its leaders are provoked at what they call a dilatory position on the part of Congress and intend to guard if possible against such a course.

DuBois Again Suffers Heavy Fire Loss; Five And Ten Store Burns

The most destructive fire that DuBois has experienced in over a year did damage estimated at over $115,000 early Sunday morning when the interior of the McCrory 5 and 10 and 25 cent stores was completely gutted. The heavy stock carried by this store was completely ruined and all of the tenants of the second floor sustained more or less loss.

The losses are estimated as follows: McCrory stock, $70,000. McCrory building, $30,000. Harry Coax, furniture, $3,000. Silas Lumber, furniture, $2,500. Mrs. Wilson, $800. E. G. LeMoria, $500. Miller and Co., $10,000. It is stated that the stock and building of the McCrory store is entirely covered by insurance. Mr. Coax did not have a cent of insurance; Mrs. Wilson carried $600; Mr. Lumber carried $1,000 worth of insurance. The loss accredited to Mr. Lumber also covers losses sustained by his father-in-law, Mr. Shaffer and his brother-in-law, Lewis Shaffer.

Executive Council Of A. F. Of L. Campaigns For Repeal Of Dry Law

Washington, D. C., Feb. 26.—Repeal of the Volstead Prohibition enforcement Act and substitution of a measure permitting light wine and beer was urged today by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor in a statement which called upon all citizens to join with labor in a campaign of this nature. The statement denounced the act as a social and moral failure and a dangerous breeder of discontent and contempt for all law. The council previously announced its intention to participate in the congressional elections through a non-partisan committee.

"Before this decision was reached," the council stated, "there were caused to be made an exhaustive investigation of the Volstead Act. It was shown by this investigation that there had been:

- "A general disregard of the law among all classes, including those who made the law.
- "Creation of thousands of moonshiners among country and city dwellers.
- "Creation of an army of bootleggers.
- "An amazing increase in the traffic of poisons and deadly concoctions.
- "An increased rate of insanity, blindness and crime among the users of these concoctions.
- "Increase in unemployment.
- "Increase in taxes to city, state and national government amounting to $1,000,000,000.

FOUR BROKERAGE HOUSES GIVE UP THE GHOST TODAY

New York, N. Y., Feb. 27.—Four more brokerage houses went to the wall here today. The suspension of A. R. Smith & Co., Thos. H. Cowley & Co., and Mosher & Wallace from the curb market association and of Shewry & Falkland from the consolidated stock exchange was announced this afternoon. Receivers have been appointed for two New York firms, Reitze & Sullivan and Mosher & Wallace for the H. K. Guthrie Co., of Philadelphia.

George Work returned to his home in Glen Campbell after spending the week in Clearfield with his sister, Mrs. Hile.

FORDNEY FOR EXCESS PROFITS TAX

Washington, D. C., February 27.—President Harding this morning declined to see Hanford MacNider, the National Commander of the American Legion, who came to the White House to demand that the present deadlock over the soldier bonus be ended. MacNider was told by George Christian, President Harding's time was so occupied this morning that he could not see MacNider.

President Harding is said to have resented MacNider's last letter on the bonus matter. This letter has not yet been answered. Commander MacNider arrived in Washington with the avowed purpose of forcing action on the bonus. Chairman Fordney called at the White House and insisted on a revival of the excess profits tax as a means of raising money for the bonus.

William P. Mahaffey, Camp Looters Caught Venerable, Respected In Huntingdon County; Resident, Died Saturday Madera Men Interested

Former Deputy Sheriff William P. Mahaffey, a respected resident of Clearfield for the past twenty-five years, died suddenly at his home on Pine street about 6 o'clock Saturday evening. The deceased, who was 79 years of age, had been a sufferer from asthma for many years and while his health was not of the best his condition was not considered alarming. He was able to be about town as usual as late as Friday evening and his sudden taking off was a sad shock to his family and host of friends.

Before coming to Clearfield the deceased resided at McGee's Mills. He was a veteran of the Civil War, an honest, upright man, and possessed a wide circle of friends throughout this section. He is survived by his widow and three sons. The funeral will be held from the Presbyterian church Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock and will be in charge of Clearfield Lodge F. and A. M. Interment in Hillcrest.

IRISH ELECTION TO BE HELD IN FOUR MONTHS

'WHO OWNS THE CAR?

A. M. Liveright, Esq., filed a suit in Prothonotary Ralston's office this morning in an effort to determine the ownership of a Paige roadster. In the statement filed Charles W. Claycomb states that he purchased the car from C. L. Powmell, but that L. E. Dotts now claims that it is his car.

Clearfield County hunters and sportsmen detest camp breakers and looters wherever they are found and will go the limit to put such undesirable behind the bars where they belong. Some Clearfield County men maintain a camp in the mountains of Huntingdon County, which was broken into and robbed a time or two. The following story from Huntingdon will be of interest locally.

James Blaine Long of Penn Township was arrested before Justice of the Peace James Kelly here Friday morning and held in $500 bail for the court on the charge of breaking and entering and stealing a tent and other articles from the Red Hill Hunting Club in Penn Township.

Long was arrested a week ago after a tent, stolen from the hunting club had been located in Huntingdon and identified as property of the Red Hill club.

Clarke Hileman, A. C. Hileman, and J. W. Ruffner, members of the club appeared against Long. He made no denial and as identification of the property was established beyond doubt, the man was held for court.

CLEARFIELD COURT ACTIVE IN COUNTY; VISIT PHILIPSBURG

About fifty members of the Clearfield Court Catholic Daughters journeyed to Philipsburg yesterday where a court was organized. Houtzdale Court exemplifying the degree work. During this month Clearfield Court also organized a court of ninety-three members at Osceola. This charitable and social organization of Catholic ladies has a large membership in this section as well as through out the United States and will doubtless accomplish much good along these lines.

BOGUS STOCK SALESMAN FINDS GLIB TONGUE LANDS HIM IN PENITENTIARY

We have known fellows who were given to talking themselves into a hole and while in Criminal Court this morning we had the opportunity of seeing a fellow who not only allowed his mouth to get him in trouble but aided and abetted the same in getting him not less than one year and a half in the penitentiary.

J. Sibert Tate, of Altoona, a very slick-tongued individual, dropped into this section last year selling stock of the Gluechrist Drug Company of Wilkingsburg, and the Soissons Brick of Connelville. He happened to run foul of Mrs. Lewis Wardo, of Madera and when he found that Mrs. Wardo had put away some $3250 against the coming of the proverbial "rainy day," Tate set about to separate her from her savings. He succeeded in unloading worthless securities on the woman to the amount of the sum in question and when the woman became suspicious and consulted her attorney John B. McGrath, of Houtzdale, Tate decided that the climate of Clearfield county was likely to prove unhealthy for him, and immediately hid himself in search of green pastures and other verdant investors. A criminal prosecution was entered and following an indictment by a Clearfield county grand jury Tate was located in sunny Tennessee, and the long and strong arm of the law quickly yanked him back into the jurisdiction of the Clearfield county courts.

Then things began to happen for Tate. The upshot of the matter was that he came into court this morning and entered a plea of guilty to a charge of larceny as bailee and after a plea for leniency by his attorney W. C. Miller was sentenced by Judge Bell to pay a fine of $1.00, the costs of prosecution and serve not less than one and one half nor more than two years in the penitentiary. Mrs. Wardo's money had all disappeared in the meantime.

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By "Skinney"

Our Uncle Samuel does not appear to be quite as black as we have been painting him, as the following will show:

In compliance with many requests for information showing what the Government has done in the way of soldier relief work, Colonel Charles R. Forbes, director of the U. S. Veterans' Bureau of Philadelphia issued detailed statement in which he said:

I have no hesitancy in saying that his Government has been more liberal and has provided far greater benefits than any other nation on the face of the globe. I am going to show, in figures, just what this Government has done in the way of soldier relief up to January 1, 1922 during the time that the Bureau of War Risk Insurance and the Rehabilitation Division of the Federal Board or Vocational Education were in operation and during the five months of existence of the present United States Veterans' Bureau, a total of 1,418,912 claims have been made by veterans of the world war and divided as follows: 486,884 for vocational training, 171,875 for insurance and 760,153 for death and disability compensation.

A total of 831,767 claims have been allowed by the bureau out of the 1,418,912, divided as follows: 381,717 for compensation, 299,879 for vocational education and 150,171 for insurance; 472,170 were disallowed. On December 31, 1921, there were 114,975 claims awaiting final adjudication; of this number 55,559 were for compensation, 1664 for insurance, 51,058 for vocational education. These figures are all as of December 31, 1921. Since that date a material decrease has been made in the number of pending cases.

During 1921 66,687 world war veterans reinstated their term insurance and 3677 reinstated their converted policies, making a total of 70,314. During the same period 76,172 converted their wartime insurance. This makes a total of 339,187 veterans who still have term policies with 259,730 having converted insurance policies bringing a grand total of 598,897 veterans who are still carrying their government insurance in one type or another. A grand total of $281,756,392.69 has been paid in insurance claims since the bureau started operations. The Government received $47,442,993.89 in premiums in 1921 on insurance and $999,697.45 set aside for insurance dividends.

Turning to the Medical Division we find that on December 31 a total of 28,687 veterans of the world war were undergoing hospitalization under the Veterans' Bureau; of this number 11,646 were in tubercular hospitals, 8272 in neuropsychiatric and mental institutions and 8769 undergoing treatment in general hospitals for general and surgical disabilities. Since the creation of the bureau 206,039 veterans have received hospital treatment and 1,115,259 medical examinations ordered.

When the amount of money that the Government has spent for its service population is considered it is readily seen that this has been the most liberal Government of the world. A grand total of $1,259,930,729 has been expended divided as follows:

Vocational training	$212,724,533.37
Insurance	238,286,606.04
Compensation	300,141,766.52
Allowances	282,049,110.33

To win a race a Jockey doesn't put extra weight on the horse that helps him succeed

No man or woman who wants to succeed in the race of life can afford the handicap of headaches, insomnia, indigestion and debility. Nor can they afford to take anything that may keep up a continual irritation of the nervous system.

Yet this is what many people do who drink excessive amounts of tea or coffee. For tea and coffee contain caffeine, a substance that is sometimes very injurious. Many doctors say that caffeine raises the blood pressure, irritates the kidneys, and over-stimulates the entire nervous system. Also that it is especially bad for growing children, or for any one who has any tendency to nervousness or insomnia.

If you want to avoid a possible cause of headache, insomnia, or nervousness, it might be well to stop taking tea and coffee for awhile, and drink rich, satisfying Postum, instead.

Postum is a delicately-roasted, pure cereal beverage—delicious and wholesome.

Order Postum from your grocer today. Drink this fragrant, healthful beverage for awhile, and see if you will not feel brighter, more active, and more resistant to fatigue—as so many thousands of others have felt.

Government expenditure in the present fiscal year have already totalled $2,066,000,000, according to a statement issued by the Treasury Department. This sum, however, is $750,000,000 less than the expenditures in the corresponding period, the first seven months of the fiscal year in 1921.

The Government is proceeding rapidly in its plan to retire outstanding Victory notes. In the seven months ended January 31 a total of $400,222,000 of Victory notes had been retired. The amount retired in January was $34,579,000.

BRINGING UP FATHER

HARRIET and the PIPER

By Kathleen Norris

Why didn't she tell Linda? Well, for one reason, she had hardly believed her own memory of the talk on Christmas day with Richard. Then she had feared opposition, feared Linda's shocked references to decent intervals of mourning; Linda's frank belief that there was no strong personal feeling involved in Richard's part; Linda's advice to a bride.

"It Isn't Exactly What I Expected Marriage to Be."

Harriet's face burned at the mere thought of it. No, she couldn't tell Linda yet; she was too tired to write tonight, anyway. Linda and Fred had not been at all approving, Christmas night, David had reproached her, had disappeared earlier than was expected or necessary; they had not failed of their suspicions.

"Well! I must go to bed," she said aloud, suddenly. She stood, one elbow on the mantel, her beautiful eyes fixed on the dying fire. It was midnight, the room and the house very still. "It isn't exactly what I expected marriage to be," she mused. "But after all," she said to herself, beginning to move about with last preparations for bed.

"I'm married to the man I love—nothing can change that. And if he doesn't love me, he likes me. I've done nothing wrong, and if my life is just a little different from most women's, why, I shall have to make the best of it! And I did tell him—I did tell him—"

And her thoughts went back to the first few minutes she had spent in Richard's office that day. They had been alone, discussing the last details of their astonishing plan, when she had suddenly taken the plunge.

"Mr. Carter, there is just one thing! Of course," Harriet's cheeks had flamed, "of course, this marriage of ours is not the usual marriage, and yet, there is just one thing of which I would like to speak to you before we go up to Greenwich." And finding his gray eyes pleasantly fixed upon her she had gone on, confused but determined: "I'm twenty-seven now—and perhaps I might have married some other man before this—except that when I was seventeen—I did fall in love with a man! And we were to be married—"

"He had—or I thought he had, brought something tremendously big and wonderful into my life," Harriet had continued, "and I was a stupid little girl, just taking care of my sister's babies and reading my father's books—"

"You are under no obligation to tell me anything of this," Richard had said, kindly, far more concerned for her distress than interested in what she was saying. "I must have known that there were admirers! I assure you that—"

"No, but just a moment!" Harriet had interrupted him. "I was infatuated—I knew that at once, God knows I've known it ever since! I went away with him, little fool that I was!"

A gleam of genuine surprise had come into Richard Carter's eyes, and he looked at her without speaking. "I was taken ill the day I left with him. While I was getting well I had time to think it over. I knew then I was too young and too ignorant to be any man's wife. I was frightened and I—well, I ran away; I went back to my sister. Both she and her husband regarded me after that as in some way marked, unprincipled, unworthy—"

"Poor child!" Richard had said. "They naturally would. You were no more than Nina's age!"

"So that's my history," Harriet had finished, simply. "I thought I had done with men. And there have been men, then like Ward, for instance, to whom I could have been married without feeling that I need make any mention of that old time. But I wanted to tell you—"

"Thank you very much," Richard had said, gravely. "If the protection of my name and my house seems well-comes to you, after some battling with the world, it will be an additional satisfaction to me."

And then before another word was spoken Fox had come in, announcing the car, and they had begun the long, strange drive.

She got into the luxurious bed, put out the bedside light, and lay with her hands clasped behind her head, thinking. The clock struck one; snow was still falling steadily outside, but in here the last pink glow of firelight flickered and sank—flickered and sank lazily.

Some sudden thought made Harriet smile ruefully. She indicated that it was unwelcome by turning over to bury her bright head in the pillow, and resolutely composing herself for sleep.

CHAPTER XI.

Morning found them half-buried in a bright dazzle of snow, the midwinter miracle that sets the most faded heart singing and the weariest blood to moving more quickly. Harriet was through with her housekeeping and her luncheon, and meditating a letter to Linda, when Ida Tabor fluttered in. Harriet heard the gay voice at the foot of the stairs: "Oh, sweetheart! Where's my little girl?"

Mrs. Tabor looked a trifle dashed when only Harriet responded although she immediately assured Miss Field cordially with bright insincerity that she had known of her return, and was "so glad!"

"I've been a sort of big sister here," she said, laughingly, "and, my Lord, these kids have managed things wonderfully! But I suppose sooner or later the machinery would have stalled without your fine Italian hand!"

"Mr. Carter asked me to come back," Harriet stated, simply. She thought the truth her best weapon, but Mrs. Tabor was ready for her.

"Mary Putnam told us that you were just resting and looking about," she said, innocently, "and Dick—generous that he is—couldn't feel comfortable about it, I suppose!"

Richard had telephoned Harriet at three o'clock that the morning papers would have "the news," and that he was coming home to tell his children of their mother's death, tonight. But she must get rid of this woman now, somehow. It would be fatal to have Ida Tabor here when Richard Carter returned.

"I might run up now and see the old lady," said Mrs. Tabor, who had flung off her furs, and beautified herself at her hand-bag mirror. She pressed her lips together for the red coloring. "Mr. Carter be here tonight?" she asked, casually.

Bottomley caused an interruption. Harriet turned to him with relief. But unfortunately he answered the very question she was trying to evade.

"Mr. Carter had just telephoned 'em, and says that 'e'll be 'ere at about six 'm."

"Oh, thank you, Bottomley!" Harriet turned back to Ida, to see her complacently loosening outer wraps.

"I came in the Warren's car," said she; "they were to run over to say Merry Christmas to the Bellams, and then pick me up. But—if I won't be in the way—perhaps I might stay and see Nina; we've become great chums. I suppose I'd better go to the room I always have? Then I'll run up and get the latest news of the Battle of Shiloh from Madame Carter!"

It was now or never; Harriet's heart began to beat. "Madame Carter has gone driving," she said. "She may be in at any moment, but before she comes, I want to speak to you. We've had terrible news here, Mrs. Tabor. Mr. Carter is coming home to tell the children and his mother tonight. Mr. Pope cabled from Paris on Christmas eve that Mrs. Carter suddenly died that day!"

Ida Tabor never felt anything very deeply, but her emotions were accessible enough, and violent while they lasted. She grew white, gasped, somehow reached a chair, and burst into honest tears. Isabelle! Why, they had been friends for years! Why, she had been so wonderfully well and strong!

"Nobody knows it," Harriet said. And not quite innocently she added: "The Fordyses, the Bellams—every one who knew her—are in total ignorance of it! If you do tell them, Mrs. Tabor—and there is no reason why you shouldn't—"

"Oh, I shall stay here with Nina tonight, anyway!" the visitor said, decidedly. "She'll need me, of course! Poor little thing!"

"It seems too bad to spoil your New Year's plans," Harriet said, smiling, "but you know Nina! She will put those long arms of hers about you—and she won't hear of your leaving her for days! With Nina," Harriet pursued, thoughtfully, "it isn't so much that one can't find a good excuse, as that she won't hear of excuses at all! I remember when Mrs. Carter first went away, there were days of it—weeks of it—just talk, tears, and talk—my arm used to ache from the weight of Nina's arm! Mr. Carter intends to leave for Chicago tomorrow, Ward will probably go up to the Entons—"

Harriet rambled on, not unconscious that she was making an impression. "Anyway," she finished, "we shall be fearfully quiet and alone here, and your being here would simply save the day for Nina."

"Oh, I really couldn't stay over New Year's," Mrs. Tabor, looking slightly discomfited, said slowly. "You see, the Fordyses—"

She looked undecided, and bit her under-lip.

"One wonders—?" she said, musingly. "Of course, I shouldn't want to intrude tonight—it would be merely to have them feel that I was here—"

"Mr. Carter has asked me to see that the family is alone tonight," Harriet said, emphatically, "but of course he may feel that you are an exception," she added, with the imperious air of a mere employee. "I only want to be able to tell him that I repeated his request, and told you the reason for it. That's"—and she smiled pleasantly—"that is as far as my authority goes, of course. I shall say simply that you know of his wishes, and if you remain, I know I can say that it was to please Nina!"

And now the two women exchanged an open glance that needed no pretense and no concealment, and it was a glance of enmity.

"When I visit this house it is not at your invitation, Miss Field!" said Mrs. Tabor, frankly.

"When I Visit This House It Is Not At Your Invitation, Miss Field!" Said Mrs. Tabor, Frankly.

"I am aware of that," Harriet said, simply.

"Will you be so kind as to tell Nina and Madame Carter," the visitor was resuming her wraps, and arranging her handsome hat and veil, "that I will be here tomorrow, and that anything I can do I will be so glad to do—is that Mrs. Warren's car, Bottomley?"

"Good afternoon, Mrs. Field!" Harriet followed her to the hall door, and heard a Partisan shout, addressed in a cheerfully high voice to kindly old Mrs. Warren, Mrs. Fordyce's mother, who was in the limousine.

"Ward's going? That Eaton ass?" "Oh, they went yesterday!"

"Speak to Bottomley?" "Yes. He and Pilgrim are quite reconciled, to reminding."

Harriet buttoned a cuff, to hide a dimple that would come to the corner of her mouth. "And Mrs. Tabor came, and would have stayed," she could not resist the temptation to add, "but I persuaded her that some other time would be better."

"Scene with Nina about it?" Richard had asked, curiously.

"Nina was not here," Harriet answered. And there was a faint smile in the deep blue eyes that she raised suddenly to his.

"Ah, well, I know, of course, that you would manage it!" he said, contentedly. "It seems black art to me. I had enough of it!"

She smiled again, and went quietly to her place. But when he summoned Ward and Nina to his mother's room, after dinner, she had disappeared, and the family was quite alone when he broke the news to them.

Harriet, presently needed again, was astonished at the emotion of the occasion, when she found her hand pressed to her forehead, and had always been so calm and so sure of herself.

Madame Carter was greatly shaken, Nina hysterical, Ward agitated, irritated at his own feeling. He had not seen his mother for seven months, but had brought nothing but a certain unpleasant notoriety to her children, yet her death struck both the young creatures forcibly, and they felt shocked and shaken.

"We can't be in the Fordyce tabernacle," said Nina in an interval between floods of sobs. "Not that I would want to, now! But I don't know; it seems to me that I am the most unfortunate girl in the world!"

"I think both you and Ward should wear black for a certain period," Richard said to her. He had been walking the floor nervously, stopping now and then beside the great chair where his mother sat silent and stricken, and put his arm about her shoulders, and murmured to her consolingly.

"When my mother died," Madame Carter quavered, with her handkerchief pressed to the tip of her nose, "my sisters and I wore black, and refused all social engagements for one year. We then, I remember distinctly, began to wear white and lavender—"

Nina broke in pettishly: "I don't see why I have to wear black!"

"Why should you?" Ward said with bitter scorn. "It's only your mother!"

Nina began to cry.

"You and I will go down to Landmann's early tomorrow, Nina," Harriet suggested, "and we'll have some one show us what is simple and nice—not crape, you know," Harriet said, with a glance at Richard Carter, "but black, for a few months, anyway."

"I think that would be the least, Richard," his mother approved. "I believe I will go with you," she condescended to Harriet, "after all, Isabelle was my daughter-in-law, and the mother of my grandchildren!"

"And I won't go to California or Bermuda or anywhere else unless Ladybird comes!" Nina burst out, with a broken sob.

"Nonsense!" her father began harshly. Harriet said:

"Bermuda? Is there a plan for Bermuda?"

If they are, one of them or possibly both of them may be wrong—possibly one or both need a trip down here where they may be regulated or repaired. Possibly just a touch on the regulating lever will put both right, and then again there may be something radically wrong with them that should be righted at once.

If it's the regulator it's a short matter to fix. If it's something else I'll do a careful job on it.

TOO MANY ON LINE, SAYS MR. HOOVER OF RADIO TELEPHONE

Washington, D. C., Feb. 27.—Three new methods of Government regulation of wireless telephones was urged by Secretary of Commerce Hoover in a speech before the National Radio Conference here today. Hoover said that the Conference should work out wave length schedules for districts instead of individuals and allocate certain times of day when the air may be used by wireless telephone agencies.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 27.—"During the last four or five months the extension of the wireless telephone has reached astounding proportions," Secretary Hoover said. "It is estimated there are 600,000 wireless receiving sets in this country and some estimates say 1,000,000. There were less than 60,000 five years ago. We are on the threshold of a new era. The genius of the American Boy in constructing somewhat complicated wireless stations for a small amount of money has forced general recognition of the conditions."

The Philadelphia Inquirer carried a lengthy story yesterday, in which Senator Fisher was given the lead as the gubernatorial candidate. The Inquirer also carried the following editorial:

FISHER LEADING GUBERNATORIAL FIELD

Sentiment for John S. Fisher, of Indiana county, for the Republican nomination for Governor has been growing with remarkable rapidity in the western part of Pennsylvania. The movement has not invaded the eastern section in force as yet, but that it will do so cannot be doubted. When it arrives it is likely to be very formidable.

There is developing everywhere an opinion that a shake-up in methods is badly needed at Harrisburg. Philadelphia and the Eastern section have been paramount. The claim of the other end of the state is that a new field for gubernatorial timber should be sought. Mr. Fisher, whose administration of the Banking Dept. has been in the highest degree efficient, is proposed as a man who, if elected Governor, would bring genuine business management into office and put an end to the grievous condition in which Pennsylvania finds itself.

Should Banking Commissioner Fisher conclude to go into the primaries he would unquestionably rally a following which would have to be reckoned with by any or all of the candidates who are at present seeking the nomination. It can be easily imagined that he would sweep any mere machine candidate into political oblivion. For this doesn't promise to be a good year for bossism in Pennsylvania.

STATE HEALTH DEPARTMENT WARNS TOWNS OF STATE AGAINST CARNIVALS

In an effort to prevent the yearly incidence of venereal disease following in the wake of carnivals, the State Health Department has issued the following communication to all mayors and burgesses of Pennsylvania communities. A copy of the letter is also sent to State Fair Associations asking that they co-operate by refusing concessions to shows and exhibitions known to be of a licentious nature.

The traveling carnivals have been a definite spreader of venereal diseases. The usual personnel of such a group is of the lowest order and the female contingent are in many instances commercial prostitutes. "These facts together with the stimulation engendered by obscene exhibitions results in a wake of venereal diseases which, from an economic standpoint alone, is most damaging to a community. "It is gratifying to note that a large number of mayors and burgesses have already taken this step. If you are one of them, we congratulate you, if not please give the matter careful and conscientious consideration. "We shall be pleased to enlighten you further if any questions regarding this matter come up. In order to cooperate we will have the State Police force notify us in advance of any exhibition to be presented in a given locality. They, in turn, will take the necessary steps to enforce the gambling and obscenity laws, in this manner overcoming any advantage which a carnival may have in getting a definite location for their show in the state. This will only be done in connection with local authorities and it is sincerely trusted that their services will not be necessary to any large extent; this owing to a general compliance through the state with the above suggestions."

LEGION COMMANDER EMPHATIC IN PLEA FOR RELIGIOUS LIBERTY

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 27.—An article entitled Rome Heads the American Legion" published in "The Protestant," at Washington, D. C., has brought a quick reply from Hanford MacNider, Commander of the Legion. In his letter to the editor, Mr. MacNider declared that his affiliations are of no consideration in the Legion.

"This country was formed by men who sought religious tolerance and it is that spirit which has made it free, fine and worth living in," the Legion commander wrote. "I happen to be a Protestant and attend a Protestant church, but as a member of many masonic bodies, in which I have taken a more or less active part, I have great admiration for that institution, the Roman Catholic Church. Its stand and teaching for the preservation for the integrity of our lawful government were well exemplified in heroic deaths of men who served in my command."

MAHAFFEY AND DUBOIS RESIDENTS SPEAK IN HIGH TERMS OF FISHER

Two interesting speakers at the Fisher booster meeting here last Thursday were Mr. W. B. Stephenson of Mahaffey and Attorney H. A. Moore of DuBois.

Mr. Liveright announced a speaker as "a man of the soil, a supporter of the good roads movement and an old school friend of Mr. Fisher."

Mr. Stephenson said, in part: "I do not know why I was called up on to make a speech. Among the ties of Mr. Fisher ever since. I have never seen a move of his but what I could endorse. I heartily endorse John S. Fisher for Governor of Pennsylvania. We find many grave questions confronting the voters of Pennsylvania today. We need a man who can administer the affairs from a business standpoint and I think John S. Fisher fills these requirements. Right now is when we need a man who is in sympathy with the good roads movement in our County. John S. Fisher is a man who is big enough to preside over all classes. We have our tax questions which are near and dear to the farmer. When we want good roads the first question asked is 'have you seen John S. Fisher?' We don't want more roads than we are entitled to but we want our share. I talked to a number of farmers in our district after receiving notice that I was expected to participate in this meeting and I think John S. Fisher will command the respect and the support of them all. I trust that everyone will see their way clear to vote for him at the primary election."

Mr. Herbert A. Moore, of DuBois, was the next speaker introduced by the Chairman.

Mr. Moore said in part: "We are passing through the most fateful period not only of the world but in the history of our own Government. This reconstruction period means much and upon Pennsylvania and her citizens depends very greatly the future not only of our own state but the future of our republic. We live in what is in most respects the greatest state in the Union. Our natural resources have placed us away up in the scale of the States, and the Nation is looking to Pennsylvania for help in this time of need. Upon our selection of a man for Governor depends very much the account that Pennsylvania will give of herself. The central part of Pennsylvania has not been represented for years in the Governor's chair. We remember Governor Bigler, from Clearfield, and several prominent men from Center County. We have in Senator John S. Fisher a man who is preeminently a man of the common people. He is a school teacher, a lawyer, a business man, bankers, manufacturers, statesmen—he represents all these and all that is good and successful in the business life of Pennsylvania and is a Pennsylvanian to the core. He is a man who will represent us well. I have been for John S. Fisher from the very first beginning because of his rugged honesty and because of his splendid home life. It seems to me that the women of this state might well rally to his standard because we have never had a better example of the true citizen than we find in John S. Fisher and all that I have had to say in regard to him has met with an immediate response from all with whom I have talked. I find no objection to Mr. Fisher. But everybody seems to be falling in line. He is our neighbor and we should be for him because he is our neighbor and in him we find represented the very things we need in Pennsylvania at this time. He is above the ordinary in politics, he is high in public life and high in private thinking and so I say, as Clearfield Countians, we may well raise high the standard of John S. Fisher and insist that he shall be the candidate of the people for this great office of Governor.

Only Sweet, Fresh Milk Used in GOOD LUCK

None but the richest of sweet, fresh milk is used in churning Jelke GOOD LUCK Spread for Bread.

Over 300 farms in the famous Elgin dairy district of the Fox River Valley of Illinois are under contract to supply the thousands of gallons of full-cream milk used daily in GOOD LUCK.

The movement of milk from farm to churnery is in swift freezer cars.

In connection with the churnery a large completely-equipped milk receiving plant is operated at Huntley, Ill. Milk handling devices are up-to-date, and advanced processes are employed.

TAKE the wheel yourself in this demonstration for any kind of a cross-examination you wish to make of the car on the following points:

How does it compete as a road car with anything you know?

And for easy handling has it any equal?

How do flexibility and light weight affect comfort as well as economy?

What about the simplicity of air cooling in all seasons compared with water cooling's complications and troubles?

Those are practical questions and important ones to many people. Leaving the answers entirely to the car is proving popular and profitable.

CURWENSVILLE

Your correspondent is very glad to have news items sent to The Progress for the Curwensville letter but we feel that we must apologize for the hash which was served Saturday night. We are unwilling to shoulder the responsibility for the first half of that letter. The author of it has evidently been on a vacation and failed to have his address changed on the subscription list, for with one single exception every item had been given in the Curwensville news under a previous date.

L. H. Bigler has returned from a visit with his daughter in Meriden, Conn.

Our genial "Jimmie" Sheridan, proprietor of two stores is a victim of tonsillitis.

Bruce Norris went to Hollidaysburg on Saturday to attend the "prom" at Highland Hall.

Mr. Ralph Volpe and bride of Mr. Union spent Sunday with Mr. Volpe's mother on Ridge Avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. John Ebock and Mrs. Virginia Nickel of Philipsburg were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Kink.

Mrs. J. E. Kratzer received a message on Saturday telling of the death of Mrs. Lucretia Carlyle, (widow of L. B. Carlyle) in Pittsburgh, where she made her home with her daughter. Mr. Carlyle was a brother of Mrs. Kratzer and Mrs. Samuel Arnold and both he and Mrs. Carlyle were well known in Curwensville. Her death occurred in Pittsburgh Friday, Feb. 24. Her body was brought to Luthersburg where she was buried Sunday, Feb. 26.

Mrs. O. H. Menzel was a visitor in Curwensville on Saturday.

Miss Mildred Korb was the guest of Mrs. Irene Sterling last week.

The Curwensville Business Men's Association have adopted a resolution urging the building of the state highway between Curwensville and Grampian at the earliest possible moment, but leaving the selection of the route to the State Highway Commissioner at Harrisburg. They are like the people at large—they don't care where it is—just so it is.

The Curwensville Refractories Company is taking time by the forelock and opening some new coal mines up the run apiece from the Arnold Addition. Two drifts are being driven in the hill, and ere many days will be completed so far that coal will be taken out. It is a foregone conclusion that the South Side street this summer, and when work is once commenced thereon, traffic will be cut off on that thoroughfare, and as the brick company got most of the coal used from the hill on the other side of the river, the mode of transportation will be cut off, hence the opening of the new mines, from which a steady supply of coal can be supplied and not retard the work at the yard.

"Jimmy" Sheridan, the hustling young merchant, was taken suddenly ill on Saturday, necessitating the calling in of a physician. During the middle of the week he took a heavy cold which gradually took a serious turn and in consequence landed him in bed.

Postmaster Crownover evidently believes that "cleanliness is close to godliness," as last week he put painters to work and had the room thoroughly painted and renovated, making an improvement greatly appreciated by the patrons and people generally.

Mr. Ralph Voulpe and wife, of Huntingdon, Pa., visited with kin folks and relatives over Sabbath. Ralph received his early education in the Snyder Stone quarries and some years later secured employment on State Highway work. He applied himself diligently to his tasks and now is a general superintendent of that department having supervision over work in Huntingdon county.

The writer was informed Saturday that the Boarding Run Stone quarries would start to operate in full force within the next week, provided the weather continues mild enough so that the frost did not enter the rock deep enough as to make the cutting of it impossible. Some new derricks and other necessary machinery has been placed on the works and will be put in position this week.

Mr. John Kelly has purchased a new truck and has entered the competitive list of draymen. He is not particular what kind of draying he does, just so he gets enough work to keep him busy.

Mr. Lemuel M. Bigler, who spent about a month down in Connecticut visiting his daughter, Mrs. Robison, has returned home.

The Baptist congregation has had some needed improvements made in the interior of their edifice. A toilet and wash sink has been installed in the basement and some other convenient work done. Since the advent of Pastor Cameron to this congregation, he has accomplished some good work, and has preached some very interesting sermons, as well as created a growing interest in religious work.

Inquiry among the merchants brings out the fact that while a fair business was done on the occasion of the $1 day sale last Saturday, the sales did not reach near as large a proportion as the sale of a similar nature a year ago, yet they have no complaint to make as to the amount of business done, for they realize that last year money was more plentiful than it is today. Again on the other hand, there has been numerous clearing up sales occurring within the past two or three months and the people took advantage of buying goods more cheaply than at regular price. However, there were lots of real good bargains offered the people on Saturday and those who had extra money took advantage of them.

IMPROVEMENT IN STEEL, TEXTILES AND CONTRACTING IS GIVING JOBS

By CLIFFORD D. CONNELLEY,
Commissioner of Labor and Industry
(Written for the United Press)

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 27.—Improvement in certain lines of industry; notably steel, contracting and textile manufacturing has resulted in a breaking up of the unemployment situation in Pennsylvania. Although there has been no marked decrease during the past two months in the number of idle applying in our ten State employment offices, favorable conditions in the basic industries has helped immeasurably in clearing up the situation. It is hoped that by the first of April conditions will be nearly normal, and indications point strongly toward general resumption of operations at this time. If a settlement is reached in the negotiations between miners and operators, and between railroad officials and employees, complete restoration of normal conditions will be an accepted fact. There is still uncertainty in the coal mines.

On February 15th, the State Employment Bureau reported 313,575 persons out of work. This is an improvement over the report of January 1st, when 321,893 comprised the army of unemployed in Pennsylvania. A strike of anthracite miners and a cessation of building activities helped to swell the ranks of unemployed at the first of the year. Employers all over the State feel encouraged with the improved conditions, although they are unable to report full-time employment. In most industries there are five men for every job that is open.

Three factors stand out as commendable examples of the way to handle a national situation of depression. Public works, first of all, were responsible for keeping down unemployment during the summer and fall months in this State. About $20,000,000 was expended in public works during these abnormal times. A second factor has been the peculiar nature of Pennsylvania industries, where the shutting down of one activity is accompanied by the opening up of another. The last factor in the unemployment crisis here has been the stalwart citizenship which is always put to the test in the time of crisis. Employers made great sacrifices to keep men on the payroll. The efforts of civic bodies to place men and women also helped to a marked degree.

LEAPS FROM SECOND FLOOR WITH CLOTHES AFIRE; IS RESCUED

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 27.—With her clothes afire, having caught from an open gas stove, Mrs. Effie Walker leaped from the second story of her home to the ground here today, a living torch. By rolling on the damp ground Mrs. Walker succeeded in extinguishing the flames.

THREE GOVERNORS BEFORE PUBLIC ON SERIOUS CHARGES

Governors of three states will figure in court litigations today. The Mississippi Legislature voted 71 to 41 to have the lower house continue its investigation in connection with the charge of seduction against Lee M. Russell. Preparations were made at Waukegan, Ill., for the trial of Governor Small, which will cost close to $500,000. Governor J. A. B. Robertson of Oklahoma, probably will be subpoenaed to testify concerning certain bank failures there.

SUPREME COURT UPHOLDS SUFFRAGE FOR WOMEN TODAY

Washington, D. C., Feb. 27.—The Woman's Suffrage Amendment to the constitution was declared legal by the Supreme Court today affirming the judgement of the Maryland State Court. The Supreme Court ruled that the 19th Amendment giving women equal right with men to cast a vote does not conflict with Article V of the constitution. A test case was brought in Maryland where the State Legislature twice refused to ratify the suffrage amendment and the test resulted in challenging its constitutionality.
